

Lauren J. Ramsay, Ph.D., SHRM-SCP

Dr. Ramsay's focus lies in providing science-based support for organizations addressing human resource management issues. She has deep technical skills in organizational development and assessment instrument development and validation. An experienced consultant, Dr. Ramsay has served both public and private sector clients. Her corporate experience includes working for Thomson Financial (now Thomson Reuters), Magellan Behavioral Health, and FMI Corporation. Dr. Ramsay also has extensive experience in academia, and has served on the faculty of several universities including University of Colorado Boulder, where she served as a Faculty Director at Leeds School of Business, and University of Colorado Denver, where she serves as a lecturer for the Business School. Dr. Ramsay teaches courses for George Washington University Center for Excellence in Public Leadership.

Dr. Ramsay earned her M.A. and Ph.D. in industrial/organizational psychology from Michigan State University. She holds an M.Ed. in counseling from University of Puget Sound and a B.Soc.Sc. in industrial psychology and economic history from the University of Natal. She is recognized by the Society for Human Resource Management as a Senior Certified Professional (SHRM-SCP).